

ABSTRACT

It is intended to provide a method for determining homogenization and/or reaction completion, capable of making the measurement time necessary and sufficient and enhancing the measurement speed, and a method for measuring solution concentration using the same. According to the method for determining homogenization and/or reaction completion and the method for measuring solution concentration using the same, homogenization and reaction completion are determined based on the optical property of the liquid mixture of a test liquid and a reagent liquid.